Instead of government of, by, and for the people, we have a government of the Exxons, by the General Motors, and for the DuPonts.

There can be no daily democracy without daily citizenship.

As Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis declared for the ages, "We can have a democratic society or we can have great concentrated wealth in the hands of a few. We cannot have both."

The only place that justice comes before work is in the dictionary.

-- Ralph Nader

(Ralph Nader) needs no gaggle of spin meisters, no policy puffers to concoct a record of integrity for him as Gore and Bush must have – he is integrity. In a time when the phrase "shallow politics" has become a redundancy, Nader's reform agenda of civic democracy is not a political position—it's his life! . . . This is bigger than a party . . . bigger than Ralph. It's us seizing our own political and economic destiny, building a politics we're for, rather than settling for the evil of the two lessers (as Dave Dellinger used to call it). Why not act on our ideals and democratic values? It's a politics that's worthy of you, and ultimately, it's the only way to win.
